

wikiHow (<http://www.wikihow.com>) is looking for someone smart, fast and creative to assist us in managing an exciting & rapidly growing project working within our visual content team. Our site has become known for the images that help people learn how to do anything, and we need some extra help in taking our visual content to the next level across a variety of mediums. Our team is looking for someone that can help in two different areas: general project assistance and art storyboarding.

General project assistance:

- Triaging a variety of content requests to the correct team
- Reviewing asset submissions across multiple mediums
- Processing internal reports on daily/weekly project KPIs

Art storyboarding:

- Creating quick sketch mock-ups, by hand and digitally
- Writing out what we want to see in various image/video assets
- Iterating with artists to generate top quality product

The ideal candidate is smart, fast, and organized. We're looking for a problem solver, who can also learn quickly and adapt to the fast pace of an internet startup. To succeed in this job we need someone that can create storyboards, edit artwork, and translate feedback/direction into written communications. You should have experience with Photoshop, Illustrator and Excel.

Note - This is a contract / temporary job on-site at our Palo Alto office.

To apply please email your resume, cover letter, and portfolio to:

Thom Scher

thom@wikihow.com

This is a post in the forum

This is a post in the forum

This is a post in the forum

This is a post in the forum

This is a post in the forum

This is a post in the forum

Classes

Coen 123

Coen 123

Coen 123